If you care about the life of the mind, the TLS is indispensable...

"Every issue of the TLS has at least one surprise lurking amid the elegant academic rangling. Three generations of my family subscribe. We all look forward to it, and we all do the crossword too" -

Claire Tomalin

"I like to read The Times Literary Supplement over breakfast. It is an education. The TLS keeps me so busy I don't have time to read other magazines"

Nigel Planer

The TLS has earned an unrivalled reputation around the world for intellectual rigour, impartiality and curiosity.

It is read - avidly and enthusiastically - by the great minds of today. Those readers and thinkers all over the world, who adore high quality cultural debate and the widest range of subjects of any literary journal.

"The TLS is unique and indispensable." George Steiner

"There is no other publication in the world that is an fearless and profound as the TLS. It bows neither to fashion nor to shibboleths; the TLS stands for truth in our time." Amanda Foreman

"The gold standard among literary reviews."

Books Ing. of Philadelphia

"Comprehensive and Compelling. It reaches out its tentacles across the arts, the sciences and other arguments that entertain those of us cheering or booing on the touchline." Melvyn Bragg

"I have been reading the TLS since I learned English 40 years ago. It is the most serious, authoritative, witty, diverse and stimulating cultural publication in all the five languages I speak." Mario Vargas Llosa

"I grew up reading (and writing for) the TLS which, without loss of gravitas, has retained its sprightly and inquisitive style even as I decline towards the curmudgeonhood from which it still helps to rescue me" Christopher Hitchens

"A radical publication. It has always devoted itself simply to English literature and to maintaining the highest possible standards of literary criticism and scholarship. It is a journal to be wondered at and admired" William Rees-Mogg

Setting the tone and standard for excellence in the field of literary criticism.

For more than a hundred years, the TLS has stood for excellence over mediocrity and reason over ranting. Today, we still cover what matters most in fiction, philosophy, social sciences, poetry and history of all times – plus the best in theatre, opera, art exhibitions and film.

We present our reviews of major books of fiction and non-fiction, plus current theatre, opera, exhibitions and films - in every language. Our essays are sophisticated and written with scholarly authority, in a lively style.

Also unequalled in the English-speaking world, is our coverage of new foreign language books, before they appear in translation.

The TLS - the greatest pleasure for a literary mind
